WEATHER FORECAST.

Partly Cloudy and Continued Warm Tonight and Sunday. For the District of Columbia and Mary land, partly cloudy and continued warm tonight and Sunday; light to moderate variable winds. A further, though slight, rise in temperature has taken place throughout the eastern and southern states, the Mississippi and Ohio valleys and the middle plains states, and a change to cooler is in progress in the northwest and over the plateau region. A barometric depression of considerable depth has appeared in the northwest, and it is causing local thunder showers in the upper Mississippi and Missouri valleys and the northwestern states. It is causing high winds over the northern plains states. The indications are that the western storm area will advance slowly eastward and cause local showers tonight or Sun-day in the Ohio valley, the lake region and Tennessee. Scattered showers are also probable in the south Atlantic and east gulf states and the weather will be unsettled tonight and Sunday in the middle Atlantic and New England states. The temperature will rise tonight in northern Michigan and extreme northern New York, and it will continue high during the next thirty-six hours throughout the middle Atlantic states, the Ohio valey and in the southeartern states. The winds along the New England coast will be moderate variable, mostly westerly; on the middle and south Atantic and east gulf coasts, light to moderate variable. Steamers departing today for European ports will have moderate with unsettled weather and showers to the Grand Banks. The following heavy precipitation (in inches) has been reported during the past twenty-four hours: Toledo, Ohio, 1.00; Tampa, 1.28; Springfield, Mo., 1.10; Rapid
